Jury Finds John Coyle Guilty of Unlawful Fishing in Lake Manawa, It required three constables and two days to get a jury capable of realizing that it was not absolutely essential for a man to plead guilty and produce his fish and seines before he could be convicted of the violation of the Iowa law for the protection of fish. In Justice Walker's court yesterday a jury composed of Dan Farlow, Earnest Stephan, A. E. Avery, H. J. Vaughn, Ed Grolt and John Skinkle, heard the evidence against John Coyle, one of the Manawa fish-ermen who have been robbing the lake. The state did not make as strong a case against Coyle as against some of the other defend-ants who were discharged or acquitted, but the jury put what it esteemed to be the proper value upon the fish stories told by

The seats went on sale yesterday, and there was a goodly number of Council Bluffs people who went early to get choice posimittee of the whole and then referred to the council and action deferred until the regular meeting of the council in February. The ordinance as introduced by John W Paul, representing the Iowa Construction company, had been taken by City Solicitor Hazleton and rewritten with provisions embodied for the better protection of the city's interests along the right of way of the proposed improvement. In the committee of the whole the substitute ordinance was considered section by section and agreed upon, and the newspapers requested to publish it for the benefit of the property owners who may be affected by the construction of the proposed improvement. The amended ordinance as agreed upon by the committee is as follows:

"Be it ordained by the city council of the city of Council Bluffs:

DR. MACRAE'S MANSION BURNED.

Fire Despoils One of the Handsomest

Residences in the City. For the third time since it was erected the beautiful residence of Dr. Donald Macrae on Fifth avenue and Eighth street was damaged by fire. On previous occasions but slight damage was done, but the fire yesterday morning was a serious one, and practically ruined the interior of the handsome home. The house has been occupied since November 1 by Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Edmundson, Dr. Macrae and tamily making their home in the Grand hotel. Just before 4 o'clock yesterday morning one of the servants was aroused by smoke and discovered that the rear part of the house was on fire. The flames seemed to be com-ing up from the basement, and were roaring up through the partitions like a furnace. The family was quickly aroused, an alarm turned in and the neighbors called upon to save the contents. The greater part of the furniture belonged to Dr. Macrae, but Mr. and Mrs. Edmundson had it stocked with valuable bric-a-brac and works of art collected while on their recent tour of a year's duration through Europe. Nearly all of this was saved, and much of the furniture was gotten out before the fire and smoke damaged it. When the department arrived the building was afire from the basement to the garret. The exterior walls are built of pressed brick, lathed and plastered on pine studding. Up through these spaces the flames were drawn as through so many chimneys. Good work was done, but the fire was not extinguished until the roof was burned off and the interior badly damaged. burned off and the interior badly damaged.
Dr. Macrae has the building amply protected by insurance. A risk of $5,000 had been written in the New Hampshire Fire Insurance company and $2,000 in the London, Liverpool and Globe. There was also a policy of $2,000 on the furniture. The building cost about $10,000, and the furniture was valued at $3,500. Mr. and Mrs. Edmundson's loss will reach about $500, upon which there was no insurance. It consisted entirely of damage to valuable art pieces and bric-a-brac. The origin of the fire has been traced to the kitchen. A pile of kindling had been left too near the range and caught fire either by the stove becoming overheated during the night or from sparks snapping from the range. The kindling wood was lying next to a wainscoted wall. The fire burned through this wall and spread upward and

Mrs. Edmundson was away from home at the time, visiting in Shenandoah. She re-turned at noon yesterday, and was naturally almost heartbroken at the sight of the ruin wrought among her valuable laces and cherished keepsakes, which she had collected abroad. All of her dresses were saved, but the loss upon other things cannot yet be fully estimated, but it is thought will greatly exceed the amount mentioned above.

Vorable condition that Council Bluffs can exert may be counted upon to induce the legislature to recognize the scheme and make the necessary appropriation. The only appropriation to be asked for is a sum sufficient to erect a suitable building in which the Iowa exhibit can be made. Not a dollar will be asked to help the work in any other way. It is felt to be a sure thing that if the Iowa legislature takes the proper steps toward recognizing the exposition, all other states will follow and its success will be assured. President Odell, in notifying the gentlemen selected, sent to each the following business-like letter:

"Dear Sir: At a meeting of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association held in the Grand hotel on the 22d inst., a resolution was adopted instructing me to select a committee of eleven members to cowith a similar committee appointed in Omaha to arrange and carry the project of a Transmississippi exposi-tion to be held in Omsha in 1898. The esolution was suggested by members of the Omaha committee who were present at the meeting, and who assured our association that such a committee was desired by them. I was given twenty-four hours in which to make up this committee and report it to the association. I have made the selection from members whom I think best qualified to perform the various duties that will from time to time devolve upon them, and in the list you will find your name."

Hon. Lucius Wells Invokes the Law to Recover a Valuable Canine. Hon. Lucius Wells caused the arrest yes-

On the day previous Miss Farr and her mother attempted to remove their household goods to Omaha and had some trouble with creditors. An attachment was issued and their scized. While Mrs. Farr remained behind to settle this trouble, Miss Farr left for the new home across the river. She was acfor Omaha the dog was following, and she claims that before getting on the car she tried to drive the animal back. She would have succeeded, she says, if her companion had not invited the dog to take a ride. When they arrived on the other side of the river Oberman took charge of the dog and left Miss Farr to look out for herself, least this is what she claimed when raigned in Justice Vien's court yesterday morning upon an information charging her with grand larceny. A similar information was sworn out against Oberman, and he arrested in Omaha.
r. Wells values his dog highly. He paid

$75 for him when the animal was celv a few months old, and, owing to the associ-ations and attachments formed for the animai by members of his family, he says he would not take $1,000 for him. At 6 o'clock last evening the dog had not been recovered, but had been located in Omaha. A warrant was also issued for the arrest of Miss Farr's young brother, but it was proven that he had nothing to do with the case and the charge was withdrawn. Miss Farr was in the little back room of the justice's office nearly all day in confer-ence with the officers. Her bond was fixed at $200. Mr. Wells announces his determination to vigorously prosecute Oberman, even if he concludes to condone the offense of the young woman.

REVIEWING ITS EVIDENCE

Prosecution in the Dickerson Case Puts in a Day on Weak Spots.

RECALLS SEVERAL OF ITS WITNESSES

Expert Martin, President Yetzer and Judge Smith on the Stand-Defense Gets in a Little Testimony.

The state did not complete its presentaion of evidence in the Dickerson case on Wednesday as was expected. Some bolstering up was thought advisable and yesterday morning a number of the witnesses who had already testified at the trial were recalled. W. S. Martin, the expert accountant, was recalled and testified that the amount of the overdrafts and overdue paper of the bank's directors in May, 1891, was $125,000. Receiver Steinke was recalled and again went over the notes and property of the bank and placed his estimate upon their values. He also testified as to the amount of cash found in the bank when he took charge of the institution as its receiver. "Please read those amounts again," said Mr. Organ, and Mr. Steinke went over the list of dollars, half dollars, bills of various denominations, so many quarters and "dimes

"Those are the correct figures, are they?" asked Mr. Organ. "They are; yes, sir," replied Mr. Steinke.
"You counted the money yourself?"
"Yes, sir."

"Then will you please tell me," said Mr. Organ, "how you managed to count $133.35 Everbody laughed and Mr. Steinke wa completely nonplussed for a moment. He explained that the $133.35 must have been ome other denomination, and he was allowed

o go at that. Bookkeeper Pellett was recalled to dentify the paper in a number of cases instituted by Receiver Steinke in the Frenent county courts against Isaac and E. J

YETZER'S TESTIMONY REVIEWED. J. C. Yetzer was recalled and testified that three notes for $5,000, $5,000 and $6,000, signed by the Atlantic Mill and Elevator company, were signed by him, and that he was, in fact, the mill and elevator company. Regarding the W. P. Christie notes, witness said he guaranteed the payment of the notes and received credit. Besides the property deeded to the bank witness had stock of goods of J. C. Yetzer & Co., of whom the "Co." was Christic. Christic agreed to pay for his interest, but never did.

At the afternoon session Mr. Yetzer testi-At the afternoon session Mr. Yetzer testi-fied that the bank was required to run the mill and keep it in repairs. He denied that he owed W. P. Christie anything and ex-plained why he had turned a flote over to Christie, after the failure of the bank, be-cause he had another deal with Christie, a kind of partnership affair at Lewis, and the smount represented by the note was Christie's share of the business. F. M. Nichols, an Atlantic banker, was put on the stand by the state. He qualified, by his testimony, as an expert on the value of notes and accounts against most of the men who owed the Cass County bank. He testiwho owed the Cass County bank. He festi-fied that there was no market value to the obligations of Isaac Dickerson, J. C. Yetzer, the firm of I. and E. J. Dickerson. He went through the list of notes held by the Cass County bank and declared most of them valueless.

On cross-examination Mr. Nichols admitted that some of the notes upon which he had passed judgment were due from business firms in Atlantic and other towns of Cass county. He did not know how much business these firms had been doing; did not know whether their property was encumbered or not, and did not know the extent of their business. valueless.

He took the accustomed oath, which was administered by the clerk of the questions of the attorneys, ruled upon the admission of evidence and decided whether his answers were responsive.

taken by him when the application was made for a receiver for the Cass County bank on December 27, 1893. The witness then told the jury and the court that he was called to Atlantic on the evening of December 27, 1893, and went to an office over the bank, where he met Julian Phelps, one of the Temple boys and J. C. Yetzer, A. W. Dickerson and Isaac Dickerson. A paper was presented to him, being the form of an application for the appointment of a receiver for the bank. The name of the plaintiff was omitted from the application, and it was suggested by some one that A. W. Dickerson should sign the application. Judge Smith decided that as the notice of the application must be served on the president and cashier of the bank that some one else should appear as plaintiff. Then the name of Isaac Dickerson was suggested as plaintiff, and his name was signed. There was some talk about the amount of the assets and the amount of the bond that the receiver should give. Isaac Dickerson had nothing to say about the proceedings, and did not say what the assets or liabilities of the bank were. Witness Smith identified the application for the appointment of a receiver and was excused without cross-examination, and resumed his duties as judge without a witness attachment.

At 3 o'clock Mr. Bruce announced that the state had nothing further to offer. The de-fense asked permission to present one witness, and then desired an adjournment until this morning. Major S. P. Ayres, one of the owners of the Atlantic Telegraph, was called to the stand and identified copies of the At-lantic Telegraph for December 28 and 29 He testified that the papers belonged 1893. to the files of the office. PACE WAS TOO HOT TO KEEP UP. Favorite Fell Back Into the Bunch in the Last Furloug. SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—Racing was esumed at Bay District today, with the Quinlan selling stakes as the feature. Owing found in fine print in the average policy Quinian sching stakes as the feature. Owing to last night's heavy rain, which left the track in frightful shape, more than half of the horses entered in this event were scratched, leaving but seven stariers. W scratched, leaving but seven stariers. W. O. B. McDonough's fast filly, Imp. Miss Brummel, ruled favorite throughout at 8 to 5, with the Buras & Waterhouse pair, Rosebud and Potentate, coupled, second choices in the betting. Miss Brummel and Potentate drew away from the field, and turning into the stretch were fully eight lengths to the good. The terrific pace, however, soon told on them, Rosebud and Highland passing them a furlong from the wire. Rosebud finally winning in a drive by a head. Potentate lasted long enough to secure the third place, while Miss Brummel or the third place, while Miss Brummel or the stockholders from future experiences in the revised statutes for the protection of the stockholders from future experiences similar to the defunct Union Loan and Building association. Iowa State Legislature Going Through the Motions of Visiting State Institutions.

ACRIMONIOUS SESSION IS PENDING

Many Important Matters Affecting Extensive Interests Certain to

brief rest. The visiting committees to the state intitutions are now making their biennial ourds and no doubt will find everything apple pie order. There is no record, exept in one or two cases, where a legislative risiting committee ever discovered anything 'off color' in the management of any state estitution, and their reports as a guide to gislative action are practically worthless The committee does not employ experts and as a rule does not put the managers under oath and never has the time and seldom the inclination to perform the duties origin ally contemplated when the custom was esablished. For this reason these "junketing trips" have failen into disrepute and are now regarded more in the nature of an outing for inexperienced members at the expense of the state than as any serious part f the business of the session.

It is hardly necessary to add that the mem bers enjoy these trips. They are received at the station when they alight by a delegation of prominent citizens, carriages are provided and they are driven around the state grounds, shown through the state buildings, feasted at the best hotels with-out cost, and their brief stay made as pleasant as possible. It is little wonder then that their reports are highly eulogistic of he managements, and almost invariably recommend that the full appropriation asked for be allowed. WILL HAVE A LONG SESSION.

When the lawmakers meet again next Tues lay the real work of what promises to be long and anything but harmonious session will begin. Heretofore the division has been principally on party lines, with prohibition as the chief disturbing factor. While resubmission and the manufactures bill will occupy more or less prominence in the discussions that will follow, they may he entirely overshadowed by new issues a ing out of the attempted revision of code. For instance, the railroad question may be brought to the front by a proposed repeal of some part of the existing statutes on that subject, or the almost certain effort that will be made to establish "joint rates." The fight over the medification of the in-surance laws is certain to be bitter and pro-tracted, and will involve both the life and fire insurance interests. The old line life companies, whose business has been cut into companies, whose business has been cut late by the numerous beneficiary orders that have sprung up, operating on the mutual plan, will have a strong lobby on the ground resisting the efforts of the nutual benevolent associations to secure legislative relief from the recent decision of the supreme court making them subject to the control of the auditor of state and requiring them to conform to the insurand requiring them to conform to the insur-ance laws. It will be a fight for their very operations by conforming to the require-ments of the law governing old line companies. The fire companies, too, will have a contest on their hands. There is a want of harmony become absolutely per between outside and local stock companies in crystal by the use of respect to proposed legislation, while the farmers and business men's mutuals will be a further bone of contention. The outside companies that cannot be sued in state courts all feel that the putting up of bonds or other collateral security with collateral security with the auditor of state places them at a disadvantage when competing with local companies, and will endeavor to have the amount of such securities reduced FRIDAY, JANUARY 24, 1896.

The people who have no direct interest in the profits of insurance companies are going to be heard. They will demand the enetment of the most stringent laws prohibitng all combinations, or agreements, of rating, or any understanding whatever etween insurance companies in regard either to the classification of risks or rates of STANDARD POLICY BILL COMING. Should the fire companies patch up their differences before the close of the session they will endeavor to push the standard policy bill, by which they propose that the state shall legalize the numerous clauser States of America from Maine to California.

TO AMEND THE JURY LAW.
One of the important measures that will be laid before the legislature after the recess will appertain to the jury law. The last general assembly passed a law entirely changing the method of drawing juries, the result of which is that juries are drawn from the full number of voters on the poll lists by lot. It is claimed that in many parts of the state the system has resulted in placing men on juries who were utterly unfit for such service; it has caused delaye in trials, unsatisfactory verdicts and has generally defeated the vory ends it was hoped to obtain. Sixth race, about six furlongs, selling: Honeme, III (Shaw), 8 to 1, won; Zoolein, 127 (Chorn), 9 to 5, second; Miss Ruth, 104 (Jones), 6 to 1, third.
